BERKELOUW BOOKS
since 1812

Our latest round of offerings celebrates the coldest continent on the earth and the children's books that have defined generations. The winter weather has decided to show up early so now is the perfect time to browse a catalogue and stock up on your winter reading.

If you or someone in your life has a fascination for the Antarctica and Arctic Ocean, then we have you covered. With a range of books covering the Jubilee History of the Australian National Antarctic Research Expedition (item 50) through to tales of early nautical exploration, there is something for everyone.

The featured book on our cover, Ginger Meggs (item 148) is just one of many interesting early and unusual editions of children's stories that will entertain young ones and adults alike. These include an early edition of Jack and the Bean Stalk (item 64) and a De-luxe Edition of The Sleeping Beauty and Other Fairy Tales illustrated by Arthur Rackham. One book that is particularly unique is an aboriginal adaption of Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland (item 68), a classic tale with an Australian twist.

We are also pleased to announce that after a long two years, the ANZAAB Melbourne Rare Book Fair is back on from 7th to 9th July and Berkelouw's will be there. If you are in Melbourne, please drop in and say hello. We look forward to talking books with you!

British prime minister for the years 1940 to 1945, the "one who bore the chief responsibility for the war and policy of the British Empire and Commonwealths" (p. vii), here offered is the first edition set of Winston Churchill's momentous semi-official six-volume history of World War II (beginning in 1919, immediately following World War I), the stated famous moral of which was, "in war: resolution, in defeat: defiance, in victory magnanimity, in peace: goodwill" (p. v). Published between 1948 and 1954 in fifteen countries and in eleven languages, it was written with the aid of a team of researchers under Churchill's literary assistant, historian William Deakin. Norman Brook, the cabinet secretary, allowed Churchill's researchers relatively free access to wartime files and in turn Churchill submitted his drafts for vetting by Whitehall (Oxford DNB 2014). Informed as it is by personal experience, he refrains from describing the work as "history", rather he terms it "a contribution to history which will be of service to the future." (p. vii) $1,500

London: Ernest Benn, (1928). 8vo. Orig. cloth (slightly rubbed). (292pp.). With portrait, numerous full-page plates, and folding map. Slight toning on end-papers. NOTE: In this book Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins, himself an Australian, tells the story of how, as the head of an expedition sent out by the British Museum, he spent over two years in Australia, and the many adventures that befell him and his party. In the course of the narrative he introduces particulars of the habits of the various forms of animal life which he had set out to collect, and descriptions of the country in which they dwell, and at times comments on some of the political and social problems which struck him so forcibly after so long an absence from his native land. Captain Wilkins completed his task for the British Museum by a survey of Groote Eylandt and Arnhem Land in the far North of the continent, and for a while he went where before no white man had trod. 'As a record of travel and of scientific service Undiscovered Australia ranks among the very finest volumes of its class.' $300
