

A test of patience and skill, the game of golf can lead to many hours of frustration and satisfaction! For those looking to explore the sport, we have you covered with several limited-edition golf titles. Delve into the process of building a golf course in 'Some Essays on Golf-Course Architecture' (item 56) or learn about one of the oldest golf clubs in the world in 'Challenges and Championships: The Royal & Ancient Golf Club 1754-1883' (item 22).

Discover the fascinating and colourful world of Ornithology with the 'Handbook of Australian, New Zealand & Antarctic Birds' 9 volume set by S. Marchant, P.J. Higgins and others (item 169). Considered by many to be the pre-eminent scientific reference on birds in the region, this set would make a welcome addition to any twitchers or ornithologists' library.

For those interested in learning sleight of hand, explore our selection of magic tricks and games. From the 'Handbook of Conjuring' (item 14) to 'A Treasury of the World's Best Riddles' (item 255), you are sure to find something new to master.

Our front cover gives you a glimpse into the diverse worlds that books explore. Uncover the natural wonder of 'Eucalypts' by Stan Kelly (item 147) and embrace the precision behind a sport in 'The Architectural Side of Golf' by H.N. Wethered & T. Simpson (item 296). Discover true 18th century craftsmanship in the 'Art of the Shoemaker' by M. De Garsault (item 100) and be inspired by beautiful jewellery in 'The Secret Archives of Boucheron' by Vincent Meylan (item 181).

Plates neatly numbered in pencil on top right corners. Fine. NOTE: John Gould was born in England in 1804. He spent his youth working alongside his father at the Royal Gardens in Windsor, where he developed skills as a taxidermist. By 1827 he had an appointment at The Zoological Society. The historic 'Birds of Australia' was a thirty-year production of which two whole years were spent touring Australia. Between 1838-1840 Gould and his wife Elizabeth, who was responsible for producing some 600 drawings for Birds of Australia, lived and travelled throughout Australia. Together they created the greatest work on Australian avifauna and perhaps Gould's major ornithological achievement. He was considered the foremost authority on the subject and on numerous occasions during his career made public his concerns about the protection and preservation of many species, which, even in his day, was showing signs of elimination due to excessive shooting. Birds of Australia remains today the most comprehensive work on the subject, with few new species being added, and sadly, five have become extinct and at least twenty others are on the verge of extinction. Fine and complete. $2,200
